In addition to its meetings, usually held at the King Township Museum, the Society has accomplished significant projects such as the founding of the Archives, restoration of the Lloydtown Cemetery, preservation of the venerable King Railway Station among other invaluable services to keep community memories vital. Membership is open to everyone.

The Lloydtown Rebellion Association (LRA)

E-mail: For contact information please ask at info@artssocietyking.ca

Description: This friendly group, begun by Mrs. Margery Coons of Lloydtown, grew from a tiny membership ten years ago, to over a hundred participants today. Its mandate is to preserve, promote and publish the heritage of King Township's part in the formative 1837 Rebellion. It is also known as the Mackenzie Rebellion led by newspaperman, William Lyon Mackenzie in Toronto but having its leaders largely in King and nearby townships. The Rebellion was a popular uprising against the Family Compact, an elite power network based in Toronto. It aimed initially at reform within the governing structure but ultimately came to see independence from Britain as a possibility. The rebels and reformers were largely from the farming community but the leadership were comfortable landowners, doctors, lawyers, printers and ministers who saw the suffering of all at the Compact's hands. Their grievances involved a dictatorial government by the rich, unjust land tenure and taxation, lack of universal education, suppression of the press and freedom of speech, domination by the Anglican Church, arrest without trial, lack of roads and a failing economy. The Rebellion, which saw a march upon Toronto from the outlying districts, led chiefly under Samuel Lount and Jesse Lloyd of Lloydtown, floundered for lack of communication and training as did its counterpart in Lower Canada (Quebec) under Papineau. In its aftermath, hundreds of rebels fled from the noose or long deportation and exile. Thousands escaped to the USA never to return, redefining the population of Canada. The result of it was successful however, since it led to the writing of Lord Durham's Report which sided with the rebel grievances and called for their redress. The rebels had won representative government for Canada by their sacrifices.

The Association, many of whose members are rebel descendants or interested amateur historians, holds meetings on the latest discoveries about the Rebellion with guest speakers but also does costumed parade marches, spirit walks at Christmas, plays, readings, fun dinners, bonfire story nights and other community events. We receive many requests for information and do school and bus tours to the Rebel Statue erected by our group under the guidance of Mrs. Coons and then-president, Brian Beatty with the entire village in 2003. The 8-foot bronze statue, commissioned by the LRA, represents all 1837 rebels and the spirit of freedom. It is the only one of its kind in Ontario. Like the rebels, the society embraces people from all walks of life and all backgrounds. If you care about freedom or being Canadian, please contact the society for a warm welcome. A pamphlet is also available to all.

Address: 1231 Ramara Road 47, Brechin, ON, L0K 1B0

Description: The Pennsylvania German Folklore Society of Ontario was organized in 1951 with a mandate to "carry on research and develop an appreciation for the early settlers in Ontario, some of whom were Pennsylvania German and their contribution to our culture". The York Chapter of this Society is one of three Chapters in southern Ontario, formed in 1954; all three Chapters are located in the three areas settled by the Pennsylvania German pioneers. The other two Chapters are the Waterloo Chapter and The Twenty Chapter (Vineland/Jordan). The York Chapter covers the areas of Markham, Vaughan, Whitchurch/Stouffville and Pickering. In 2004, the 200th Anniversary of the arrival of our Pennsylvania German settlers was commemorated by the unveiling of a plaque bearing the names of all 69 of the early settler families and located on the cairn at the Markham Civic Centre. Also, an exact replica of a Conestoga wagon was built as a permanent reminder of our rich heritage and a remembrance of those who went before. Collections are privately owned, however the Society has published nineteen books and four videos to-date. Information is available by contacting the above.

The Era: Newmarket's Digital Newspaper Project <http://news.ourontario.ca/newmarket/search> launched in 2010 as part of Newmarket's Shared Digital Infrastructure project. Links from the library website's Genealogy, Local History, and Databases web pages take researchers to a searchable resource of newspaper images and indexed articles. The library adds content to the digitized collection. In May 2011 the years available are 1852-1861, 1874-1882 and 1930-1950.

Other available materials include microfilm of Census returns for Newmarket and parts of the surrounding area, Cemetery Listings for most of York Region, and a newspaper clipping file. The library also subscribes to the Toronto Star Pages of the Past (high quality digital images in the original page format from 1892 to 2006) and Ancestry Library Edition. These two databases are available for "In Library Access" only.

The Newmarket Public Library borrows material for library users through Interlibrary Loan. These materials include genealogical information from the National Library & Archives of Canada and the Archives of Ontario.

Email: bcpvinfo@trca.on.ca (general inquiries)

Phone: (Main Line) 416-736-1733, Jim Hunter (Collections Registrar) ext 5423,

Address: 1000 Murray Ross Parkway, Toronto, ON, M3J 2P3

Description: The Black Creek Pioneer Village collection provides an expansive representation of nineteenth century life in a rural crossroads village up to the period of Confederation. Simulating the development of the Province whose story it tells, it has grown from its agricultural roots to include archival material, social and domestic artefacts, books, fine art, furniture, machinery, textiles and tools, many with a local community association to the history of Toronto and York Region. Two significant parts of the collection include toys (the Percy Band Toy Collection of over 2,000 objects) and lighting (the Catherine Thuro Lighting Collection of over 150 working kerosene lamps). The latter is featured annually each December at Black Creek Pioneer Village during the "Christmas By Lamplight" special events.

The collection at Black Creek Pioneer Village originated in 1954 with a donation from Mr. and Mrs. Percy Snider of seventy pioneer tools dating from the early to mid-nineteenth century. The collection has grown over the last fifty years to over 50,000 acquisitions obtain from 2,911 donors. In addition, various artefacts have been acquired through funding that has been provided by the Conservation Foundation of Greater Toronto, the Heritage Branch of the Ontario Ministry of Culture, the Toronto and Region Conservation Authority, and Wintario. Included in the collection are a number of original books pertaining to nineteenth century social history, foodways, trades, technology, and material culture.

York Regional history is represented in the collection through various archival documents relating to the Stong, Snider and Fisher families, who were founding settlers in the area. The collection also includes a number of York Region land documents and family Bibles associated with some of the Region's founding families (Dalziel and Fisher). In addition, there are a number of nineteenth century artworks that are portraits of early York residents in the collection. Also located at Black Creek Pioneer Village is a community cemetery with 15 gravesites associated with area founding families (Stong, Kaiser and Hoover). Also on the Village property is a family plot associated with the Dalziel family.

A small portion of the collection is available online through the Village's website www.blackcreek.ca, where it may be searched by number, name, maker, place reference (e.g., Vaughan), and subject heading. Each record has at least one thumb-nail, which links the user to images of the item in question. At the moment the online catalogue is not yet complete, however more descriptions are being added.

The Loydtown Rebellion Association

E-mail: For contact information please ask at info@artssocietyking.ca

Description: This friendly group, begun by Mrs. Margery Coons of Loydtown, has grown from a tiny membership ten years ago, to over a hundred participants today. Its mandate is to preserve, promote and publish the heritage of King Township's part in the formative 1837 Rebellion. It is also known as the Mackenzie Rebellion led by newspaperman, William Lyon Mackenzie in Toronto but having its leaders largely in King and nearby townships. The Rebellion was a popular uprising against the Family Compact, an elite power network based in Toronto. It aimed initially at reform within the governing structure but ultimately came to see independence from Britain as a possibility. The rebels and reformers were largely from the farming community but the leadership were comfortable landowners, doctors, lawyers, printers and ministers who saw the suffering of all at the Compact's hands. Their grievances involved a dictatorial government by the rich, unjust land tenure and taxation, lack of universal education, suppression of the press and freedom of speech, domination by the Anglican Church, arrest without trial, lack of roads and a failing economy. The Rebellion, which saw a march upon Toronto from the outlying districts, led chiefly under Samuel Lount and Jesse Lloyd of Loydtown, floundered for lack of communication and training as did its counterpart in Lower Canada (Quebec) under Papineau. In its aftermath, hundreds of rebels fled from the noose or long deportation and exile. Thousands escaped to the USA never to return, redefining the population of Canada. The result of it was successful however, since it led to the writing of Lord Durham's Report which sided with the rebel grievances and called for their redress. The rebels had won representative government for Canada by their sacrifices.

The Association, many of whose members are rebel descendants or interested amateur historians, holds meetings on the latest discoveries about the Rebellion with guest speakers but also does costumed parade marches, spirit walks at Christmas, plays, readings, fun dinners, bonfire story nights and other community events. We receive many requests for information and do school and bus tours to the Rebel Statue erected by our group under the guidance of Mrs. Coons and then- president, Brian Beatty with the entire village in 2003. The 8- foot bronze statue, commissioned by the LRA represents all 1837 rebels and the spirit of freedom. It is the only one of its kind in Ontario. Like the rebels, the society embraces people from all walks of life and all backgrounds .If you care about freedom or being Canadian, please contact the society for a warm welcome. A pamphlet is also available to all.

Description: The Pennsylvania German Folklore Society of Ontario was organized in 1951 with a mandate to "carry on research and develop an appreciation for the early settlers in Ontario, some of whom were Pennsylvania German and their contribution to our culture". The York Chapter of this Society is one of three Chapters in southern Ontario, formed in 1954; all three Chapters are located in the three areas settled by the Pennsylvania German pioneers. The other two Chapters are the Waterloo Chapter and The Twenty Chapter (Vineland/Jordan). The York Chapter covers the areas of Markham, Vaughan, Whitchurch/Stouffville and Pickering. In 2004, the 200th Anniversary of the arrival of our Pennsylvania German settlers was commemorated by the unveiling of a plaque bearing the names of all 69 of the early settler families and located on the cairn at the Markham Civic Centre. Also, an exact replica of a Conestoga wagon was built as a permanent reminder of our rich heritage and a remembrance of those who went before. Collections are privately owned, however the Society has published nineteen books and four videos to-date. Information available by contacting the above.

Email: bcpvinfo@trca.on.ca (general inquiries)

Phone: (Main Line) 416-736-1733, Jim Hunter (Collections Registrar) ext 5423,

Address: 1000 Murray Ross Parkway, Toronto, ON, M3J 2P3

Description: The Black Creek Pioneer Village collection provides an expansive representation of nineteenth century life in a rural crossroads village up to the period of Confederation. Simulating the development of the Province whose story it tells, it has grown from its agricultural roots to include archival material, social and domestic artefacts, books, fine art, furniture, machinery, textiles and tools, many with a local community association to the history of Toronto and York Region. Two significant parts of the collection include toys (the Percy Band Toy Collection of over 2,000 objects) and lighting (the Catherine Thuro Lighting Collection of over 150 working kerosene lamps). The latter is featured annually each December at Black Creek Pioneer Village during the "Christmas By Lamplight" special events.

The collection at Black Creek Pioneer Village originated in 1954 with a donation from Mr. and Mrs. Percy Snider of seventy pioneer tools dating from the early to mid-nineteenth century. The collection has grown over the last fifty years to over 50,000 acquisitions obtain from 2,911 donors. In addition, various artefacts have been acquired through funding that has been provided by the Conservation Foundation of Greater Toronto, the Heritage Branch of the Ontario Ministry of Culture, the Toronto and Region Conservation Authority, and Wintario. Included in the collection are a number of original books pertaining to nineteenth century social history, foodways, trades, technology, and material culture.

York Regional history is represented in the collection through various archival documents relating to the Stong, Snider and Fisher families, who were founding settlers in the area. The collection also includes a number of York Region land documents and family Bibles associated with some of the Region's founding families (Dalziel and Fisher). In addition, there are a number of nineteenth century artworks that are portraits of early York residents in the collection. Also located at Black Creek Pioneer Village is a community cemetery with 15 gravesites associated with area founding families (Stong, Kaiser and Hoover). Also on the Village property is a family plot associated with the Dalziel family.

Descriptions of the collection are now available in an online catalogue, where it may be searched by number, name, maker, place reference (e.g., Vaughan), and subject heading. Each record has at least one thumb-nail, which links the user to images of the item in question. At the moment the online catalogue is not yet complete, however more descriptions are being added.

Description: The Museum was established in 1971 and houses a general history collection that interprets the histories of the former Township of Whitchurch and Village of Stouffville from the time of the earliest settlers to fifty years ago. The Museum site covers about two acres and includes five historic structures: the Bogarttown Schoolhouse, constructed in 1857 and believed to be the oldest brick schoolhouse still standing in Southern Ontario outside of Toronto; a pioneer Log Cabin, circa 1850; the Brown House, a Victorian farmhouse constructed by James Brown in 1857 and restored to reflect the 1880s; a Barn which was dismantled and reassembled at the Museum in 1983 with an authentic raising bee; and the Vandorf Public School, first constructed in 1870 and also an OPP Headquarters from 1957-'71. The Museum's collection of over 13,000 items contains furniture, household furnishings, textiles, personal artefacts, and tools and agricultural equipment. The Museum also maintains an archive of historic photographs and documents relating the history and development of the numerous families and hamlets that created the former Township of Whitchurch and the Village of Stouffville. Researchers are encouraged to call ahead to book an appointment. Please note that the Museum will be building a new Visitor/Community Centre in 2010-2011. Construction is estimated to start in March 2010. Visitors are encouraged to call ahead to confirm accessibility to the buildings.
